Explanation

The end-user tariff for Mogas 95 increases compared to the previous month, mainly as a result of the continued rise in the international price. In addition, the increase in the price of Mogas 95 in recent months was mitigated by the distribution of earlier purchases made at a lower purchase price, which is no longer the case now. The purchase price of Gasoil (U)LSD decreases this month. Similar to the previous month, the purchase price is completely based on the average international Platts prices during the first two weeks of the month (May) resulting in a significantly lower purchase price. Also, more favorable purchasing arrangements have been agreed upon (reduced premium). This, combined with the adjustment of the surplus/deficit component, has led to a decrease in the end-user tariff for Gasoil (U)LSD compared to the previous month
